Berlin Hosts Major Event for Impact Investing Industry, Attracting Attendees from 60+ Countries, Reflecting a Growing and Resilient Industry

Produced by the Global Impact Investing Network, the GIIN Impact Forum caps off a year of global convenings designed to increase the scale and effectiveness of impact investing.

BERLIN, October 7, 2025 — The Global Impact Investing Network (GIIN) today brings its 2025 forum series to a close with the GIIN Impact Forum, the final of three major global convenings this year highlighting regional innovation, cross-border exchange and emerging opportunities. Following successful events in San Francisco in April and Singapore in July, the Berlin gathering will showcase how the impact investing industry is evolving to meet the scale and urgency of today's global challenges. The GIIN will also release its annual market research, offering insights on the field's trends, allocations, and performance.

Participants at the Berlin forum will explore the role of impact investing in meeting this moment – addressing critical needs, expanding opportunity for those left out of recent prosperity and fostering a sustainable planet. Session topics include expanding access to essential services through emerging technologies, advancing regenerative agriculture and food systems, strengthening leadership and decision-making, and scaling climate solutions. The agenda is designed to promote cross-regional learning, highlight high-growth opportunities and surface investable strategies at the intersection of financial returns with measurable, meaningful impact.

“The impact investing community is a bright spot for people around the world, and it’s an honor to bring together these innovators and leaders from across geographies,” said Amit Bouri, CEO and Co-Founder of the GIIN. “Following successful events in San Francisco and Singapore, Berlin is a chance to reconnect, share perspectives and chart a path forward so that more capital is deployed toward impact, ultimately building a better future for people and the planet.”

Highlights of the Berlin forum will include:

- Keynote addresses by leading climate investors and social innovators;
- Various panels, sessions and workshops on impact measurement and management;
- Panel sessions featuring perspectives from family offices and institutional investors like pension funds and insurance companies;
- “Lightning talk” showcases of scalable impact ventures;
- Investor roundtables and brainstorm sessions;
- Launch of new research based on the GIIN's annual market survey;

The GIIN Impact Forum underscores the resilience and growth of the impact investing industry while providing a platform for investors, entrepreneurs and other stakeholders to connect and advance solutions to some of the world's most pressing challenges. As the field scales and innovates, the forum serves as a reminder of the collective potential and power of capital to deliver outcomes that safeguard our future. Explore the full agenda here.
